- ii) What does the poet want to convey by saying 'Friendship is a guest'?

Ans: The poet wants to convey that friendship is welcomed and treated with love and care in a home by saying 'Friendship is a guest'

- iii) When does a house truly become a 'home-sweet home'?

Ans: According to the poet, a house becomes a home when people share love, treat friendship like a welcome guest. This is the moment when the house changes from just a structure into a peaceful place for the heart.

Practice Work (Home assignment)

- iv) If a house is very big but people do not love each other, is it a home? Give your views.

Ans: Children will frame their own answers.

E. Answer the following questions with reference to context:

2. *“Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage!”*

i) Name the poem and the poet from where the above lines are taken.

Ans. The name of the poem is ‘A Home Song’ and the poet is Henry van Dyke.

ii) Why does the poet mention “stone walls” and “iron bars” at the start?

Ans. The poet uses these to show that the physical things do not define our spirit or our home. Just as bars do not always make a prison, expensive walls do not automatically make happy place to live.

iii) What is more important than walls, according to the poem?

Ans. According to the poem, freedom of heart and peace of mind are more important than walls.

Practice Work (Home assignment)

iv) Do you agree with the poet? Why?
